We will have to beg pardon of our up the road subscribers for failing to get off their papers on the early train, but it was unavoidable. Inasmuch as this is the first time we have been unable to accommodate them in this respect, we feel that we can depend on their forbearance. We will compensate by giving them an extra large paper.

Treasure found in Boone County.
The East Tennesseean understands that James Geasland, living on Emory river, a few miles north of Kingston, while plowing in the field, his plow turned up a box, which upon examination, proved to be full of specie—principally Mexican dollars of the date of 1834 and 1836—about a peck. The box was partially decayed. Mr. G. declines to state the amount of the treasure. The supposition is that it was buried during the war by some one who was taken off without divulging the secret. Col. R. K. Byrd says the money was found on a piece of ground on his place; that it looks like money but he believes it to be counterfeit money, and to have been buried there by a well known counterfeiter, formerly a resident of that neighborhood, but now serving out a term in the penitentiary.

A Running Accident Near Jonesboro.
Wednesday morning, last, Mr. Sam. H. Anderson started from Jonesboro with his four horse omnibus, to attend the closing exercises at Tusculum College. When about a half mile below Jonesboro one of the horses became unmanageable as they were going down a steep hill, thus causing all to take flight and run away. Mr. Anderson and three other gentlemen were inside the bus, and the door became fastened so they could not get out, until the horses had run some distance. In the meantime, Mr. Anderson jumped out at a window, and with the exception of a good coat of mud and a lively shaking up, he escaped unhurt, as did all the others. The driver was thrown from his seat and badly, if not dangerously hurt. Two physicians were called to attend him and getting rid of the passengers, soon overturned the omnibus, and the two front horses breaking loose from their fastenings, they all soon stopped, only slightly injuring the vehicle and seriously scratching the horses. Anderson, with his usual energy and vim, and was off to Tusculum, so as not to disappoint persons who had been expecting to take passage in his conveyance to and from the college.

HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, April 19. The journal this morning embodied, for the first time, the petitions deposited in the box, so that the reading of the journal occupied twenty minutes. A question was raised upon this fact by Mr. Garfield, who expressed the hope that it would not pass into precedent. An explanation was made by the Speaker as to the reasons why he had directed this to be done, the principle one being that under the existing circumstances, while petitions and memorials are being presented, accompanied by bills, the question as to which committee they should be referred to became important, and already differences had arisen between the Chair and members presenting petitions, as to their proper reference. It was, therefore, deemed proper that the House itself should have the opportunity of passing on the question.

In the course of the discussion, it was suggested by Mr. Frye that it might be found there would be no objection whatever to the introduction of bills next Monday, however absurd they should be. The matter was finally referred to the Committee on Rules.

The Subsidiary Silver Coin bill then came up as unfinished business of the morning hour. Mr. Warner, of Ohio, moved to amend the third section, which makes silver coins legal tender (to the amount of ten dollars) by adding the words, "for all debts public and private."

The measure was considered at some length, and numerous amendments were considered and acted upon.

Mr. Garfield's amendment, to substitute the words "Lawful money of the United States" for "Legal tender money," and Mr. Springer's amendment making subsidiary coin a legal tender to the amount of twenty dollars, were agreed to.

Before the final disposition of the bill the morning hour expired and the bill went over to Tuesday.

The House then went into Committee of the Whole on the Legislative Appropriation bill. Mr. Price, of Iowa, was entitled to the floor, but yielded to Mr. Frye, of Maine, who said, in connection with the misunderstanding which had taken place yesterday between the gentlemen from Kentucky and Ohio, Blackburn and McKinley, in regard to the proper construction of Blackburn's speech, he desired to read the construction put upon that speech in the State of Mississippi by that now famous paper, the Okolona States, which he received through the mail. He thereupon read an article complimenting Mr. Blackburn for his anti-war measures, spiced and bristling over with such phrases as these: "Down with the devil-born amendments!" "Down with the pictures of Lincoln, and the scoundrels who surrounded him!" Mr. Blackburn took the floor and, in a highly impassioned manner, replied to Mr. Frye, and was responded to in a like tone. At 4:45 the House adjourned until Monday.

FOREIGN NEWS.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 19.—The ukase just issued ordering the appointment of Governors-General for six of the most populous districts in Russia, with perfectly despotic powers, begins by stating that recent events have shown that there exists in Russia a band of criminals, who, though not Russians, are very determined, and aim at undermining the State. After referring to the recent murderous attempts upon high officials, and the attempted assassination of the Emperor, the ukase continues: "These crimes have necessitated the provisional adoption of exceptional measures in order to permit of exemplary punishment of guilty persons and provide government officials with the necessary powers for maintaining order." The ukase proceeds to announce the provisional appointment of Governors-General of St. Petersburg, Charkoff and Odessa, who are invested with extended and extraordinary powers. Similar powers are conferred upon the Governors-General of Moscow, Kieff and Warsaw, and the civil administration in the above mentioned districts is placed under the control of the Governors-General in the same manner, as they are subordinate to the commander-in-chief of the army in time of war in districts where martial law has been proclaimed. The control of all educational establishments is vested in the Governors-General, who are also empowered to send before military tribunals all civilians in districts over which they preside. The Governors-General are also empowered to summarily remove from their respective districts all persons whose continued residence may be considered dangerous; to order the arrest of any person whatsoever on their own judgment and responsibility; to suppress, temporarily or permanently, any newspapers or periodicals, should they appear to follow subversive tendencies, and generally to adopt such measures as they may consider necessary for the preservation of the public peace. The Emperor and Empress go to Lividno on the 24th of this month.

A disturbance occurred at Roster, on the river Don, in the government of Ekaterinoslav, on the 14th. The police being unable to suppress it the military was called out and restored order. The riot lasted from the evening of the 14th to the morning of the 15th. The residences of the chief of police, and the overseer of the town and district, together with the police station and police records, were destroyed. Two policemen were killed.

A Story of Pioneer Life in East Tennessee.

The last issue of the Sunny South, published in Atlanta, Georgia, contains a thrilling and interesting story from the pen of the well known author of our city, "Mary Faith Floyd" (Mrs. W. G. McAdoo). The title of the story is "Calvert's Cave, A True Story of Pioneer Life in Eastern Tennessee." The plot is laid at Calvert's Cave, near the House Mountain, in the eastern part of Knoxville, and the time is about the year 1790, at which time that region was almost an unknown wilderness. In a prefatory note the writer says:

"The basis of the following story is well known to those versed in the earlier history of Eastern Tennessee. The tragic events of this narrative, somewhat changed in minor particulars, occurred in the neighborhood of Knoxville, that region so full of romance of history. No where in the Western Continent exist more unbounding elements for the pen of the poet, the novelist or the historian than in this land of alternate valleys and mountains, and of rushing streams of unparalleled beauty. No wonder the aboriginal savages clung to this favorite section with desperate tenacity, and disputed with the white man inch by inch the possession of so fair a domain. The particulars of this story were told the writer many years ago; the narrator being a venerable lady, since dead, who was born near the spot where the incidents occurred."

The story goes that at this early day there came to this locality Mr. Francis Calvert, a collateral descendant of Lord Baltimore, having a wife and two children, they having come hither to enjoy the wild and romantic pioneer life. They lived quite happily until one day Mr. Calvert was obliged to visit Knoxville, which was about 12 miles distant, and then a beautiful cant village grown around a frontier military post. On his return home night befel him, and he was attacked and shot mortally by the Indians near his home. He crawled into a cave near by, and died and was found there the next day. From this the cave took its name. The Indians also attacked the house, and Mrs. Calvert fired at them with the rifle, and it was afterward ascertained her shot had killed two and wounded one of the savages.

Mrs. Calvert went back to her relatives in Annapolis, Md., where they had formerly lived. There she remained until old age had crept on her and then came back to Tennessee, to find the remains of her husband and remove them to Maryland. She was unable to find the grave, however, and after living with a family in the neighborhood for some time she mysteriously disappeared one day, and after a long search was found sitting cold in death in the same Calvert's cave where her husband died. "The superstitious country people," says the writer in conclusion, "affirm that, to this day shrieks and groans are occasionally heard in the furthest recesses of the cavern and that the dim figures of Mr. Calvert and his wife are sometimes seen gliding about its yawning mouth at the hour of midnight."

The same issue of the Sunny South also contains a poem entitled "Fair April" by Prof. W. G. McAdoo.
